

A Minimal Economic Perspective:
By Shomit Sirohi

America is finally doing well, while EU is not in crisis except for its state capital. Basically I would argue that the American and EU development is perfect except for fiscal policy crises with India and the Arab world not in crisis except for a fiscal discipline in the Arab world being a Quranic form of government and in Latin America a general crisis and economic policy of only state developments which is finally not a dynamic development but a normal economic stasis. Even as Argentina is developing perfectly in state policy and capitalist policy.

I. Economic Analysis in Marx of the World today

When Marx talked about the commodity-form and added the whole system of capitalism to it, he added a labour theory of value which meant that labour, or labour-time in a socially necessary form, is finally related to surplus-value which then is profit which amounts to the David Harvey thesis that the economic matrix is finally related to the surplus of capital and surplus of state which also means agrarian developments and city developments all of which are presently in economic heights – imagine a country and its economy transacting in finance what is actually transacted in monetarism and propertieism – that one has a government and its fiscal monetarism and even a capitalism with its global monetarism, which then is also property of the state and property of capital – this then is the global capitalist multinational companies which is also the factories and sweatshops which create capital and labour.

The present economic transactions in capitalism and its monetarism and propertieism continues to economic gains, while the state and its fiscal policy in America is perfected as a heights which in India as well as the Arab world is in a public sector gain and budget planned gain – the crisis is though in the Arab context there as a budgetary crisis which means there is a crisis in fiscal policy in Iran and the Arab world which is surviving on public sector and small business models of economics without fiscal policies which is simply a crisis of its economic plans as minimalist and accounts in Quranic forms instead – Europe though is going through a fiscal policy crisis.

II. A Syllogism from Marx to follow the Crisis in Europe – Capital Gains while State is in Crisis

The syllogism is thus –

	Surplus-value – wealth and capitalism with state wealth
Labour rights and wages which then abstracts to	abstract labour
and intellectual labour

Then of course socially necessary labour time which then is across society – which then is wage crisis

This syllogism proves that there is global capitalism with its multinational companies which finally makes the labour-time back to its activity which is now only a state-labour crisis. Basically an agrarian and city crisis of finally culture.
